Moshe's Final Battle — And Ours

By Rav Mendel Wuensch

Moshe's last mission wasn't against Egypt or Amalek.
It was against Midian – the embodiment of baseless hatred.

Midian didn't attack us out of fear.
They hated us simply for existing.
No logic. No reason. Just ego. Sound familiar?

Ego turns others into threats.
It blinds us to their goodness.
It celebrates their pain.
It disconnects us from G-d.

That's why this battle mattered most.
Because unity isn't just nice – it's sacred.
And ego isn't just ugly – it's dangerous.

The cure?

Humility. Empathy. Courage to look inward.

A humble person doesn't fear disagreement.
He welcomes it – as a path to growth.
He listens. He learns. He elevates.

A man shines his flashlight down into the valley.
"All darkness," he says.
But when he turns the light on himself,
he sees the shadows were always within.

Here in Eretz Yisrael – where Jews of all stripes walk side by side – the temptation to judge is strong.
But the calling to love is stronger.

Don't let ego build walls.
Let humility build bridges.

This is the battle of our generation.
And when we win it – together –
we bring the Geulah that Moshe Rabbeinu began.
