

TEFILAT YAMIM

PARSHAT BESHALACH SHABBAT SHIRAH

13 Shevat 5786 - 31 January 2026

Dear Community Family,

This week we received news that many of us never truly believed we would hear: the return of the last hostage, Ran Gvili, רנן גבילי.

For the first time in twelve years, there are no longer any hostages being held in Gaza.

For so long, this moment felt impossible. We hoped, we prayed, but if we are honest, many of us quietly stopped believing it would ever fully happen. Even the Rabbanut said it was unlikely. Over time, many communities stopped saying the Mi Sheberach for the hostages, not out of indifference, but out of emotional exhaustion, out of hearts that learned to brace themselves against “reality”.

And yet, here we are.

This moment should shake us awake.

Because the truth is that miracles have been unfolding before our eyes this entire time. Some were dramatic and public, others quiet and hidden. But slowly, almost without noticing, we grew accustomed to them. Or perhaps we grew too tired to recognize them.

The return of the final hostage, our hero, reminds us that what we label as “impossible” is never impossible for Hashem.

In this week’s Torah portion, Beshalach, the Jewish people leave Egypt and the Torah tells us something striking: Moshe takes the bones of Yosef with him. Before the splitting of the sea, before the song, before the triumph, we carry bones. Memory. Promises made, promises kept.

Carrying his bones was a declaration: Geulah may be delayed, but it is inevitable.

And yet, in the very same parashah, after witnessing the plagues and the collapse of the greatest empire on earth, the people stand at the sea and cry out in fear, “Did you take us out to die in the wilderness?”

How could they doubt after seeing so much?

And if we’re honest, how could we not recognize ourselves in them?

We have seen protection, resilience, unity, and survival beyond logic. We have seen our people endure what should have broken us. And still, we slip into fear. Still, we stop expecting miracles. Still, we stop praying with full hearts.

The Torah is not ancient history, it is a guidebook for the challenges we face today. And this week, reality is reading the parashah back to us.

The return of the last hostage is HaShem gently, but firmly, reminding us: I have been with you the whole time.

This is a moment for deep gratitude. To say thank you not only for what we understand, but for what we don’t. To trust that even when our faith falters, Hashem never stops working on our behalf.

And it is a moment to look forward.

If this “impossible” moment could arrive, then surely the ultimate Geulah is not a distant dream. It is a reality we will greet very soon.

As our incredible heroes, the soldiers of Tzahal, sang after discovering Ran’s body:

Ani ma’amin
be’emunah shleimah

I believe with complete faith

beviat haMashiach,
in the coming of the Messiah,

ve’af al pi
she’yitname’ah,
and even though he may delay,

im kol zeh achakeh lo
bechol yom she’yavo.

nevertheless, I await his coming every day.

Thank You, Hashem.

Please enjoy the students of Yeshivat Shalaavim, we will see you all soon G-d willing,

Rav Mendel Wuensch
